Don't just Tolerate the Pain and Discomfort of Chronic Hives. New treatments are being explored and we need your help.

A new study is testing the efficacy and safety of various dose regimens of CDX0159 to treat people with Chronic Inducible Urticaria (CIndU) also known as chronic hives triggered by exposure to cold (cold urticaria, ColdU) or scratched and/or rubbed skin (symptomatic dermographism, SD). Your participation in this study will help to provide data on an investigational product, CDX0159, to reduce itching, hives, angioedema, burning sensations, and pain related to Chronic Inducible Urticaria (CIndU).

Participation in this study will require:

- Participation in three study phases over 48 weeks
- Attendance of 15 scheduled in-clinic study visits
- Documenting daily and weekly diary entries of your symptoms and experience throughout the study participation
- Close monitoring by study doctor and/or study staff throughout the study Help us determine if CDX0159 is a viable treatment for chronic hives.
